The Morris Brothers

Traditional Gospel At Its Best

By Dave Wilcox

"The Great Commission". Many of us are familiar with it, but very few of us practice or support it. The great commission is simply going into all the world and telling the people of Jesus Christ and his saving grace. The Morris Brothers are the only group I know who heed this great command through their singing ministry in the states. The Morris Brothers are truly one of a kind.

Herb, Homer and Vaughn Morris began their music careers in north Georgia under the direction of their father, the Rev. Frank Morris. The boys were naturally interested in singing and picking since they came from a musically talented family.

Rev. Morris pastored their home church where they had an excellent music department under the direction of A. E. Barton. Mr. Barton was a noted singer, songwriter and publisher. He took great interest in the Morris Brothers, and he should receive credit for his early direction of the trio.

During the late '40's and early '50's, The Morris Brothers were regular performers on several radio stations in Georgia and they were working hundreds of dates a year, when their music careers were suddenly interrupted when Homer answered God's call to preach the Gospel. The Morris Brothers disbanded. continued on page 39

After Homer graduated from Tennessee temple, he and his wife, Polly served 12 years as missionaries in Mexico. They developed and built churches along the Texas-Mexico boarder which are still thriving today. It was during this period that Herb and Homer found "Missions For Jesus International".

In 1973 the leadership of the mission field was given to others, allowing Homer to return to Atlanta to re-form the present Morris Brothers sound which is Country Gospel spiced with Bluegrass. The guys have recorded over a dozen albums featuring their original songs. They work almost 150 dates a year in the Southeast with a desire to branch out in 1986.

1984 saw The Morris Brothers reach an agreement with Nashville's top Gospel producer, Eddie Crook, who produced their albums for MorningStar Records. "Heavenly Band" was their first effort and featured the single "Where Is The Lamb?" which was a big hit in several regions across the country. "Glorious Things" - is their second project with Eddie Crook and it features a return to the "country" sound opposed to the flavor of bluegrass. Continuing with this sound, The Morris Brothers will be back in the studio in the summer working on a new release.

This year will mark the second year in a row The Boys have hosted the North Georgia Annual Singing in Marietta. Again this, April over 15,000 fans are expected to attend the three-day singing which showcases the top Gospel talent.

The Morris Brothers continue to diligently support their mission work in Mexico. As far as we know "Missions For Jesus International" is the only mission work where every cent raised goes directly to the field! There are no administrative fees of any kind! All profits derived from the singing group also go to the missions field.
